

Skimming and Scanning for Resources and Search Terms

In your early stages of research you will not be reading books cover to cover or articles from top to bottom. You will be skimming and scanning resources to determine if they will be valuable for your continued research. This is also a time to gather additional search terms to help you narrow your topic and expand your knowledge.

What do you look for when you skim and scan books, articles, and websites.

Books

Table of Contents
Title Page
Copy Right Date
Chapter Headings
Index
Illustrations
Summaries
Author Biography

Articles from Popular Magazines

Title & Subtitle
Publication
Publication Date
Author
Summary
Sub-Headings
Illustrations

Articles from Scholarly or Academic Journals

Title & Subtitle
Publication
Publication Date
Author
Summary
Sub-Headings
Illustrations
Abstract
Introduction
Discussion
Conclusion
References

Web Page

Site Menu
Illustrations
Author and Organization
Last Update

For additional information visit:

<http://library.wrdsb.ca/research/reading-for-information/>

Bibliography

"Reading for Information." Library Learning Commons. Waterloo Region District School Board, 2012. Web. 5 Dec. 2012.